

Occupational and environmental cancer epidemiology

Almost everyone is in the workforce at some time in their life and is then potentially exposed to carcinogenic agents in the workplace. During this session, Dr Mary Schubauer-Berigan will provide an introduction to the burden of cancer attributable to occupational and environmental carcinogens, discuss the challenges and controversies related to occupational and environmental epidemiology, and demonstrate how occupational and environmental epidemiology studies may be used in risk assessment to set exposure limits to reduce the cancer burden.

• • • • Dr Mary Schubauer-Berigan

Deputy Head
Evidence Synthesis and Classification Branch (ESC)
Head IARC Monographs Programme
IARC/WHO